"In the language of the mafias, a murder where the body is never found is called lupara bianca, or white shotgun. To disappear with no one knowing how they killed you is a terrible warning, as it haunts the souls of those left behind. April Smith's White Shotgun will haunt you." — Robert Crais

Andrew Zach says, "Four critically acclaimed novels, published by Knopf, edited by the famed Sonny Mehta, and a deal to adapt one of her own novels for television could make Smith the perfect protagonist of her own thriller. Of course, having many friends in the FBI and having participated in training scenarios at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Virginia, could make her a bit of a hard target."

You can pick up White Shotgun and April Smith's earlier works featuring FBI Special Agent Ana Gray at Bookwagon New and Used Books on Ashland Street, in Ashland, Oregon - call 541-448-4477.
